

GEN. JOHNSON SAYS: Kennedy's Ship Picture 'dreary'

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy's long awaited report of the Maritime Commission is a searching survey of the complex and baffling situation in American shipping.

It clears up securities and punctures self-serving arguments and dogmatic conclusions. It paints a dreary picture of the outlook for any American Merchant Marine—which is not in the least to be criticized because, on the basis of this report, "dreary" is the word for it.

No other kind of picture could have been painted truthfully. This is a fine and unique example of the kind of investigation that is needed before heading governmental action. If we had seen more of that and less closet magic in New Deal legislation, we might be further along.

Just how bad the prospect is can be gathered from excerpts from two findings: first, that of the existing fleet of 112 ocean-going vessels aggregating 5,407,000 tons, 1,305 vessels of 7,402,000 tons will be 20 years old or more by 1942 and more than 400 vessels of 2,500,000 tons are already more than 20 years old; second, that the prospect of private replacement building is 68 vessels within a period of five years—but only if we have a drastic amendment of the Merchant Marine Act providing much more generous subsidies for private building.

To this the report adds: "If the private fleet is unable to finance the 65-ship program, which is likely to be the case, the government itself will have to build the vessels."

Since 1917, we have spent nearly 4 billion government dollars to get a Merchant Marine. We built it within a few years and post-war years and then stopped building. It will soon be worn out. The vast shipbuilding capacity we created in 1917 to 1919 is also obsolete. We could not rebuild faster than 40 or 50 ships a year. The present condition, according to the report, is so bad that, without improvement, it would be impossible to go ahead at all.

If, "Uncle Sam, you built your merchant fleet at all at once. Competitive costs on an high nobody is going to replace it unless you do it yourself, or finance most of the rebuilding. Even at the best you can do, you can replace it only after years of constant rebuilding."

I doubt if a hard-boiled study of the rest of Joe Kennedy's hard-boiled report could come to any other conclusion than that the only clear way out is government ownership and operation of whatever merchant fleet we think we need for economic, naval or military reasons. The report does not say that, but the figures suggest it and also that the bill for it might be high enough to make even Harry Hopkins blink in his.

Few governments own ships and operate them, if it can be avoided. In talking with Mr. Kennedy, I gather his idea is this: Under the Maritime Act, as it is written, it is certain that private capital cannot be induced to rebuild any important part of the fleet.

Mr. Kennedy has suggested that the modification be made which might possibly induce it. In the meantime, while Congress is considering these changes, he is negotiating the building by private capital of such special types as oil-tankers in sufficient numbers as, with naval building, will fill the shipyards to capacity for a year.

That will provide a breathing space while we see whether these last thin chances for private ownership and operation will be taken. If they are not, we will have a Merchant Marine owned and operated by the government or not Merchant Marine at all. Mr. Kennedy's report is, I think, a landmark and the most valuable work of kind in recent years.

Duke 'Insulted' Shuns Armistice Day Service

An Armistice Day ceremony at three o'clock this afternoon in St. Anne's Cathedral, Boston, was held to mark the anniversary of the armistice. The Duke of Windsor, who was in the city on a private visit, declined to attend the service.

"At the same time, I hope you will give me the opportunity of meeting you on another occasion," the Duke remarked in his hotel with his American-born Duchess at his side.

Obviously distressed by this latest evidence of Anglican clerical opposition, the Duke did not have a single word to say to his wife, who made up her mind to give up attending the service until the last minute.

Even while hundreds of thousands of spectators flocked to the Champs Elysees for the celebration of the 20th Anniversary of the armistice, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who were in the city on a private visit, declined to attend the service.

The Duke also had a brief conference with his secretary, Dudley Woodhouse, this morning. Interference by the Duke's secretary was understood to be the reason why the Duke did not attend the service.

McCormack Asks U. S. to Break With Soviet

Boston Congressman
Angered by Russian
Propaganda Attacks

Congressman John W. McCormack today called on Secretary of State Cordell Hull to sever diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia for attacks made upon this country.

The South Boston congressman charged the Soviet had clearly violated both international law and the so-called Lend-Lease Agreement by permitting the Communists to direct propaganda attacks on the United States.

He sought immediate withdrawal of all diplomatic relations and the "Lend-Lease" program, which he said was further along.

McCormack said, "The Soviet regime for similar actions received a strong protest from our government and the Lend-Lease program was withdrawn."

The efficacy of such action, in the world of appeal of the Communists to class action, and the attack on democracy in the United States, should not be tolerated. McCormack said he would change their tactics but they overthrew their ultimate objective in the determination to overthrow government by force.

Writing to Secretary Hull, McCormack said: "I recognize the right of a people to have any form of government they wish."

I do not, however, recognize the right of any government to permit within its territory an organized propaganda campaign so harmful to the peace of other countries."

When directed at the United States, as in this case, it is our duty to take the necessary steps to protect ourselves against such propaganda and against future occurrences."

McCormack said he would change their tactics but they overthrew their ultimate objective in the determination to overthrow government by force.

Japanese Seizure
Under Fascist Rule
Matsui Arrogantly
Issues Warning
To Foreigners

SHANGHAI, Nov. 11.—Tightening their stranglehold on Shanghai, the victorious armies of Japan captured Shanghai today, and their commander-in-chief today issued a warning to foreigners.

Nantao, the last native district of Shanghai to hold out against the Japanese, was captured today when several thousand Chinese laid down their arms and greeted the Japanese with a salute.

A few others attempting to resist were shot down. The Japanese commander-in-chief today issued a warning to foreigners.

The latest warning to Shanghai city authorities and the defense forces of all powers, including America and England, was delivered by Lieutenant-General Iwano Matsui, the Japanese commander-in-chief.

He said that he would send part of his troops to the settlement and also to the Japanese concession. He said that he would send part of his troops to the settlement and also to the Japanese concession.

One of the reasons for Matsui's warning was his belief that the Japanese would be able to take Shanghai without a fight. He said that he would send part of his troops to the settlement and also to the Japanese concession.

More Building Needed to Aid Recovery

Federal Obstacles Have Resulted In Big Slump

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)
Special to Boston Evening American
NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—There is a strong tendency to emphasize building activity as being the chief requirement for business recovery. And it is true that usually out-look periods have been marked by large building or construction activity in some field, not necessarily residential.

What are the facts today? After slumping from 1934 on, building activity began to rebound last spring. Private building has at no time shown any buoyancy under the New Deal, the totals have been far below any year between 1921 and 1930.

HERE ARE CAUSES

Along with the large unemployment, this is one of several proofs of the abnormal and artificial nature of the "recovery" since 1933. Now it is proposed to do something to change this condition. The first step, therefore, is to find out why the building depression has continued to exist.

It would surely be unwise to plunge into doing something without removing the obstacles or depressants that have held building down for five long years.

Probably they are as follows: the loss of being related roughly in the order of their importance:

- (1) High taxes
- (2) Government's own policies and restrictions
- (3) High labor costs and shortages
- (4) Monetary uncertainties
- (5) High material costs
- (6) Relatively sharp rise in residential rents.

Most of the foregoing points are prevalent and are generally understood. The overlapping and duplicating tax burdens laid on by the state and federal governments—for example, are well known.

REST RESISTANCE

It is not generally realized, however, that under existing conditions existing rents is a major obstacle to the residential building.

The great middle class market is attracted by relatively fixed salaries and fixed expenses. The overlapping and duplicating tax burdens laid on by the state and federal governments—for example, are well known.

Grief in Wake of Crazy Attack

LOUISIANA SLOAN

Mrs. Helen Sloan and her daughter, Lorraine, 12, comfort each other as Mrs. Sloan's mother, Mrs. Mary J. Murphy, 71, fights for life in Somerville Hospital, gravely wounded by the crazed landlord of their Somerville home. Mrs. Sloan saved her daughter's life by stepping between Mrs. Sloan and the landlord and receiving a stream of bullets intended for the daughter.

Woman 71, Shot, Rugged Economist Battled for Right

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKESER

International News Service

Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (INS).—In a nation cursed by the influence of apocalyptic and premature groups, Francis P. Garvan, 71, a rugged economist, was shot and wounded today by a crazed landlord of their Somerville home.

Mrs. Murphy was in critical condition following the attack in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Helen Sloan, with whom she lived in Medford street, Somerville. The two sisters were removed to an emergency operation last night.

According to police, Santouris suddenly entered the Sloan kitchen yesterday, a short time after he had argued with the younger woman over basement storage space and pointed a revolver at her as she gave her name, James, 16-year-old Somerville High School student, and her daughter, Lorraine, 12, this lunch.

Attacked by her servant, Mrs. Murphy ran from another room and threw herself in the path of the bullets.

The landlord, who police said had been, acting strangely since he lost his shoe factory job several years ago, was seen upstairs in his attic room and barricaded himself within the room.

Police said that the man was seen in his attic room and barricaded himself within the room.

Meanwhile Mrs. Murphy had walked out, called a neighbor and a neighbor to the man was running amok, and then called for the ambulance.

Bright Business Future Seen By Packers

Swift, Cobell Think U. S. Not Near Depression

By B. C. FORBES

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Since Chicago is packing headquarters for the world, it is fitting to start getting a picture of economic conditions here by obtaining first-hand information from heads of major packing companies.

Neither the president of Swift & Company nor the president of Armour & Company is pessimistic. Both emphasize the importance of the role played—and especially to be played—by Washington. Need for constructive cooperation from the administration and Congress is not overlooked.

NOT NEAR DEPRESSION

President G. E. Swift of America's largest packing enterprise does not think "we are anywhere near a major depression." He tells me:

"My guess is that industry is in one of the temporary corrective processes of what normally takes place during recovery periods. I do not think we are anywhere near a major depression."

"There are still weak spots in the industrial picture. Construction has gone forward slowly because of high costs. The undistributed profits tax is an other barrier to sound recovery. There would be much more confidence if business had assurance of a balanced budget and freedom from artificial restraints."

"For the long run, I have every confidence that production will be increased and the standard of living raised."

"As to our own business, I think now that earnings will not be as large as we hoped early in the year. But principally to declining values during the last few months. The fact that we have gone through some decline in inventory values this year may be advantageous for us next year."

BETTER PROMISES

President R. H. Cobell of Armour & Company says:

"I believe that the new fiscal year, starting November 1, holds promise of much better things than the closing months of the present fiscal year would seem to indicate."

"The stock market decline has to a certain extent affected all branches of trade. Just how far new laws and regulations are responsible remains to be seen."

"However, they have contributed to the situation, and it seems evident to me that we need something more in government regulations for the next six months if we are to get back in step with the conditions of last spring and early summer."

"Probably our present wage levels, freight charges, and tax bills are here to stay for some time. Assuming this to be true, it seems obvious that we must serve if substantial reductions can be effected in the cost of producing livestock."

"Never has there been a time when improvements in breeding, feeding, processing and distributing were as important as they are today."

NO OTHER WAY

"In no other way, can the consumption of meat be kept at the level it needs to sustain its health and to get back in step with the conditions of last spring and early summer."

"Probably our present wage levels, freight charges, and tax bills are here to stay for some time. Assuming this to be true, it seems obvious that we must serve if substantial reductions can be effected in the cost of producing livestock."

Girls Aim Drive at Fake Bachelors

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 11

(AP)—The drive to keep "fake bachelors" out of the "Society for the Prevention of Married Men From Being as Bachelors" proposed today that "all married men be compelled to wear wedding rings."

Miss Jessie Atwell, past president of Oklahoma's business and professional women's club and founder of the mouthful of satire, explained:

"Most of the girls I know don't have much time to waste. We need to know, right off, whether a man is married or not."

The Brighter Side

For U. S. & P. Out
By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

It appears that the number of Lammies out of New York city is gradually reaching a new all-time high. A Lammie is a runaway from a city in a short, a fugitive.

Lammie is a corruption of the word Lammie. We have seen a considerable number of Lammies in the past, but in the process of evolution of the word, Lammie has become a word of Lammie, meaning to beat.

Some of the word sharps may undertake to give us an argument about our tracing. They may contend that Lammie comes from Lammie, meaning to beat, but in the process of evolution of the word, Lammie has become a word of Lammie, meaning to beat.

WINTER NO HELP

Every sound authority we have consulted supports our own contention, though we must say we get mighty little help from the likes of Mr. Noah Webster, who contents himself with discussing Lammie as a Lammie, giving no thought whatever to Lammie.

HARDLY GOOD FORM

It is not necessary to nobody where he is "away." Probably you do not know, and it is not deemed good form to ask. Police circles may get the impression that you are one of those noisy fellows like Mr. Tom Dewey, who has been elected district attorney of New York County little back muscle, and all.

BROADWAY WORRY

They point out that the proud east bank of every New Yorker is just the Greater City has a population of 2,000,000. But that Mr. Dewey's election is reducing the population on rapidly.

MIGHT TRADE MATS

This may be adjusted as soon as Mr. Dewey takes over. Mr. Dewey is a great fellow for figuring out plans for correcting the difficulties of this nature. He might arrange to trade some of Mayor LaGuardia's old wood bats to Palestine for a few extra dollars. We would not care to be a Lammie in a country where there is no extradition treaty with the U. S. and have Mr. Dewey make up his mind to negotiate a trade for us.

Legion Post Asks Monument to Seas

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—American Legion Post No. 36, meeting on the eve of Armistice Day, heard first hand reports of military preparations in Europe and adopted a resolution asking that a monument be erected at the geographical center of this country's monuments to the armed and real friends and allies—the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

'Thrush' Dare Lark to Her

Charge Sifted In Quincy

Quincy police and Norfolk county authorities today investigated charges that fully 2000 names appearing on papers for the repeal of compulsory insurance were fraudulent.

The papers, now held at Quincy city clerk's office, were a referendum petition inaugurated by an automobile club for repeal of the state automobile insurance law.

Police Chief John J. Avery and Assistant District Attorney George Artale conducted separate investigations and plan to question a number of persons who were employed by the club to obtain signatures.

Attention is the papers was attracted when about after about were turned in suddenly clean and showing no sign of the usual wear and tear of a petition. It was further noted that the writing was usually in the same type of ink and that the handwriting was similar in most cases.

In addition, names of dead persons were found signed, as well as city officials, who on questioning said the papers had not been prepared by them.

MURDER IN TOMBS

Probed in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10 (INS)—Mystery death of a prisoner behind the grim walls of the Tombs, New York city prison, gave police and the district attorney's office enough circumstances today to launch a murder investigation.

Victim of violence was Peter Grubbs, whose crushed body was found on the floor of the cell block 10, a few feet from the cell door. The body was that he had jumped with his head against the wall.

But an autopsy disclosed fractures of the skull, fractured ribs and lacerations covering the body. The opinion was that the drop to the floor was the cause of death.

IMMIE CLARK: MOTHER, GRIEVING, STILL WAITS

To help a heartbroken North Quincy mother find her son, a man and open letter is published today in the Boston Evening American. The letter is from Immie Clark, who writes: "I am writing you again. Somewhere, I just can't believe you read her letter yesterday and failed to call her up. Yet, I talked with her this morning. Immie, and she is still heartbroken, waiting to hear from you. I'd rather believe someone you missed that letter. It's the only reason I'm going to carry her up."

CCC Quota Now Filled to Limit

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Robert Roberts announced today the Civilian Conservation Corps' military quota of 20,000 young men and women was filled during October with the enrollment of 13,243 replacements.

The replacements take the place of soldiers who have left the CCC camps in recent months either to begin their education or because they had reached the age limit of 23 years.

One of a congressional appropriation of $15,000,000 for the current fiscal year, the corps has expended $4,500,000 for schooling.

Bigger Quota for Boston As Red Cross Drive Opens

The annual Red Cross Roll Call, nationwide fund for relief of flood and disaster opened today in Metropolitan Boston to continue until Thanksgiving.

Announcement of the drive was made to the White House by Senator Little Miss Young was escorted by Edward A. Taff, chairman of the Metropolitan Chapter Roll Call.

The Red Cross seeks this year to increase its total adult enrollment from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000, a program which requires Boston to increase membership from 30,000 to 40,000.

Leading in a state-wide sponsorship of the drive is Governor Charles F. Hurley, who in an official proclamation called on all leaders of the state to support the Red Cross this year as it never has been supported before.

Chairman Taff announced that the drive is a national campaign has been completed and that hundreds of workers will go into the field today to continue the drive in a successful close year to Thanksgiving.

Culinary Magic Revealed by Martha Lee

American Cooking Expert Shows Wares to 900

Mrs. Martha Lee, 300 women at 1900 N. Main, the night at Martha Lee home, revealed the art of the Boston Evening American's culinary expert.

The evening session, sponsored by the Boston Chapter of the American Society of the 1st Mrs. of the H. A. Church, Mrs. Lee was the hostess.

Mrs. Lee, with her two sons, arranged a long table with food and drink with mushrooms, peas and coffee as a breakfast table.

For dinner, she presented a pot of chicken, potatoes, and onions, and a three-layer cake with butter cream frosting.

FASH GETS FLOWER
For decorative purposes, 16 pink and white pastries were placed on the table in the shape of a flower.

The table was set with 16 place cards, each with a flower design, and a large centerpiece of flowers.

Mrs. Lee, who is a member of the American Society of the 1st Mrs. of the H. A. Church, was the hostess.

Hitch-Hikers Get Lift by Ford

WINDSOR, O. (AP)—Along Ford, the motor magnate, can be seen in the park of a thumb along an open highway.

John Smucker and Helen Strong say that while hitch-hiking to their home here from jobs at Pontiac, Mich., they flashed the thumb sign at an approaching car at the outskirts of Dearborn, Mich. A large, maroon car pulled to a stop and gave them a lift to Monroe, Mich.

"To whom are we indebted?" Smucker and Strong inquired as they got out.

"We no one," came the reply, and then as if an afterthought "I am Mr. Ford."

THIS IS LIFE

By

Robert E. Rogers

An interesting piece of evidence about an almost forgotten episode in American history popped up the other day in a press dispatch from New Orleans.

It had to do with Jefferson Davis, famous camel train, when he started in 1855 when he was Secretary of War for use by the army in the arid and desert regions of western Texas. The camels, Davis thought, would be faster and more durable on long marches. For a time they served for purposes pretty well, although the army, due to the expense and maintenance required, had to use them.

When the Civil War began the camels were scattered all over Texas. Jefferson Davis was the president of the secession conference. He remembered what the camels had done and got the idea that they would be very useful as overland blockade runners, and the Confederate postoffice department captured a number to use in a kind of camel express.

Davis' Idea Was to Use Camels to Transport Gold

There were originally 75 of the beasts imported especially from Africa for government service. It was supposed to be used by President Davis to transport gold, but he used it for transport of gold and silver. Of course, the capture of the camels was a failure, but it was a failure to capture the camels.

How, you might ask, did the camels get to Texas? The camels were brought to Texas by one of the men engaged in the blockade running. The camels were brought to Texas by one of the men engaged in the blockade running. The camels were brought to Texas by one of the men engaged in the blockade running.

"My father was an overland blockade runner who led the camel train through this section to avoid capture by the federal blockade on the Mississippi river. On their backs were bags of gold pieces and bullion that had been obtained, somehow, in Texas. The money was supposedly to be taken to the headquarters of the Confederacy in Alabama."

Just before the war, there were Spanish camels in the town of Charles IV, the town of Charles IV, the town of Charles IV. The camels were brought to Texas by one of the men engaged in the blockade running.

There is a whole story of the introduction of camels into the country, the origin, the use of the camels in the blockade running, the use of the camels in the blockade running.

So many things are still a matter of controversy in our American history. It is not often that something which is recorded in local history can be proved as dramatically as this story of the camels by the digging up of "bones of camels" within the lifetime of a man who at the time was hearing the details from his own father.

"Pony Express" Riders Did Yeoman Service

It was a truly heroic feat when the first mail train was sent by the pony express. The story of the pony express is so interesting that it is hard to believe that it ever existed.

Of course, you undoubtedly have a more vivid and proper picture of the American past than did we who had to rely on the school texts.

It has come at last. Here are the bridges intelligence quotient fanatics out with a new "I. Q." by which a woman may measure her own daintiness, smartness, discrimination, common sense and foresight by checking up on the articles she carries in her pocket book.

They have designed a series of tests, in the form of a questionnaire, which will enable a woman to determine her own intelligence quotient. The tests are designed to measure a woman's ability to make decisions, to solve problems, and to understand the world around her.

RUNNING the three-hour stretch in the 8 o'clock, 9 o'clock and 10 o'clock manner (all WNAC) the program promise is particularly glowing for tonight.

Thursday, of course, means Vallee at 8, the recently launched "Good News of 1938" at 9, and Bing Crosby's ear-soothing "Music Hall" hour at 10 p. m.

If it is a mere good luck wish to expect to hear these three stars, the program is a good one. But if it is a wish to hear the best of the three, the program is a good one. The "Good News of 1938" is a good one. The "Music Hall" hour is a good one. The "Good News of 1938" is a good one. The "Music Hall" hour is a good one.

Army - Irish Game Sell-Out For Saturday

Reg opens its season next Oct. 1 against Pennsylvania, according to an announcement issued by the school.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 11 (AP)—Cornell University's policy of scheduling only major football opponents will be continued through 1938 and 1939.

The big Red opens its season next year against Olemiss October 1 and winds up against Pennsylvania on November 24, according to an announcement issued by the athletic department last night.

would gang up on him at the annual meeting and strip him of the presidency.

Jacobus is one of the smoothest politicians you'll encounter in any walk of life. He proved that by the vote he polled to retain his berth as chief executive of the P. G. A.

Instead of a liability, as was indicated during the Harlow Jam, Freddie Corcoran was an asset to Jacobus. In all probability Corcoran pledged as many votes as, if not more than, Jacobus.

During the year he was with the big time pros, Freddie sold himself one hundred per cent. He proved beyond an argument that Jacobus' selection to replace Bob Harlow was a ten strike.

During the coming A. U. annual conventions, the New England branch will be like a ship without a rudder with George V. Brown gone from its reward.

For more than 30 years, Brown maneuvered the N. E. A. A. U. into favorable spots and out of turbulent situations.

He knew the A. U. as did no other member of that organization, and any indulgence made the New England branch could always be traced to him.

Manager Art Ross is polishing off his Bruins daily at the Arena preparatory to the first home game of the season with the New York Rangers Sunday night at the Boston Garden.

The Rosses never before have been so fit, mentally and physically, for a National Hockey League campaign. Hershey proved to be an ideal training site, and for the first time in many seasons the Bruins are displaying a "one for all and all for one" intimacy.

Betty West Wins U. S. Horse Loses Pimlico Race English Chase

BALTIMORE, Nov. 11 (AP)—Miss Betty West, Westbury, L. I., easily won the race track derby at Old Pimlico today.

The blonde young winner of the year's long summer hunt met the Monrovia colt, which had won the first race for women jockeys in Pimlico's history over a field of five in a silver trophy.

Miss Madeline Stevenson, Philadelphia, on Tony, a 10-year-old, look over by half a length in the first and a half turning in the second.

Johnston, woman trainer from New York, rode By the Sword to third place.

Other finishers in order were Miss Sue Honey, Baltimore, on Jockey Joe; Mrs. Daisy Richards, wife of Jockey Henry Richards, on Windora's Hope; and Miss Brunner, Chestnut Hill, Pa., on Mother Earth.

The lipstick-and-powder event was as polished as the riders could make it. There were 36 wifely and no betting.

When the poor and needy seek water and there is none and their tongue faileth for thirst, the Lord will hear them. —Isaiah XLII, 17.

The Editor Says:

DESPITE some anxious moments and some glaring mistakes, America has come through another year of peace to observance of Armistice Day, anniversary of the end of the World War.

We had hoped it was our LAST WAR. We still have that hope. But events throughout the world compel us to face the fact that the possibility of future war REMAINS.

Most recent and MOST IMPORTANT of these events is the nine-power conference at Brussels, where America found itself being steered toward an alliance with England, France and Russia against Germany, Italy and Japan—virtually a CHOICE OF SIDES IN THE NEXT WAR.

Everything that went into the pot for the brewing of the World War is in the pot of world affairs now. Bluntly, the world is back where it was in 1914.

AND SO ARE WE

—The events of 1917 did not get us into the World War. The THREE YEARS OF MISTAKES subsequent to 1914 DID!

We couldn't see that our lack of preparedness for defense was making us the prey of the first nation that STOOD TO GAIN by taking advantage of our weakness.

We couldn't see that the entanglements we were forming in those three tragic years with foreign nations were ROPES AROUND OUR NECK, dragging us over the brink of war.

And here we are again, as surely as in 1914, confronted by the decision whether we shall be STRONG ON DEFENSE or weak, whether we shall pull the dragnet of foreign alliances over our head or KEEP OUT OF IT.

These facts CHANGE THE CHARACTER of Armistice Day.

They make it a day, not for celebration of a peace that came once, but for dedication of all our national effort to KEEPING WAR FROM COMING AGAIN.

AMERICA CAN HAVE PEACE.

But we can't have it by making our deliberate weakness an INVITATION to violation of our national integrity.

And we can't have it by allying ourselves FOR OR AGAINST nations that are HEADED FOR WAR and would drag us into the abyss along with themselves.

PRACTICAL ADVICE

—best describes the excellent address Lincoln Filene, Boston merchant, made this week to three hundred members of the American Association of University Women.

"I have for years had the conviction," he said, "that it is a waste of time for any boy or girl to go beyond the second year in college without very definitely heading for some specific career and shaping his or her studies to that end."

Colleges ought to frame that observation and hang it in every classroom for students to read.

One of the major problems of modern education is the fact that many young people complete sixteen years of study without any adequate preparation for the job of earning a living. It accounts for much of the unhappiness and disillusionment we see among graduates.

Parents and teachers should consider it their duty to encourage students to choose vocations or professions during the last years of high school. College, then, would be a definite means to an end.

No thinking person would undertake the construction of a house without some idea of what kind of house he intended to build. Lives, more important than houses, require even more careful planning.

A WORTHY CHARITY

—is the annual Red Cross Roll Call that begins today and continues until Thanksgiving.

Here is a world-famous organization that speaks a language understandable by all—the language of mercy and help in time of peace and war. Its desire has ever been to save and to protect.

President Roosevelt a short time ago expressed the nation's gratitude in these words:

"For fifty-six years now the Red Cross has been ever ready to move to any scene of distress, and these past two years have given us every cause to be increasingly grateful that we have this volunteer organization of our citizens through which we can express our humane impulses."

Let us during the Roll Call express our individual gratitude by providing the financial assistance that will enable the Red Cross to carry on. It will be money well spent.

CHECK STRANGERS!

—that's Police Commissioner Timilty's order to the special service squad of patrolmen and detectives he has enlisted in his campaign against safebreakers and holdup men.

We hope the experiment succeeds. Boston can't much longer tolerate the epidemic of thefts that has become almost a daily occurrence in recent weeks.

Armistice Day

Civil war in Spain, international war in China and rumblings of war everywhere—so comes another Armistice Day, with America still hoping for world peace, but hardly expecting it.

We turn to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in our national capital and, almost, we can hear his voice whispering to us from out the grave:

"If the tears course down your cheeks, weep not for me, but for the living. I am at peace. For me the war is done. Grieve, rather, for the young men doomed to die."

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—MANHATTAN has but a few left of those elderly and wealthy clubmen like Peter Arno (lives on hilariously—the last of the vanishing aristocrats. They are seldom seen before 5 p. m., when, spruce and buttoned, they fare forth for the vesperal sooth and soda.

They are the town's most metropolitan dressers, expressing a sartorial selfness, and they are lone wolves. Boas to a limited acquaintance list are quick and curt. They never stop to chat. More than any other class, they have the pre-occupied air of hands off.

The higher grade restaurants on the fashionable East Side always have several of these courtiers for dinner. They select the table at which they dig tourist as one might a rare jewel. And they study the menu in the rapid manner of a tourist perusing his Baedeker.

Cocktails are sipped slowly and the chaff of the wine seems a matter of vast importance. Invariably a dish is sent back for more seasoning and the cigar is fingered tenderly and cautiously until before puffed with the same leisure. Major Pennington's!

A knotty problem for smart and respectable men in the handling of the girl barfly. She is something distinctly new in the metropolitan scene—a good looking, snappy dresser and quick on the uptake. But she never forces a flirtation and there is nothing of the old dropped-handkerchief approach. It may take a fellow several days to scrape up a howling acquaintance, and it might be a week or ten days before she will accept a drink. By avoiding the usual cheap gestures, the manager eventually to land her catch. There is, of course, a craven slaver in the background who will arrange one of those "amiable settlements without publicity." That is, if the sucker comes across.

Floyd Gibbons has an especially built typewriter which he uses to prepare his broadcasts and newspaper copy. It has the standard key board and he can make it boom. But the type is five times the regular size and a line will not carry more than five words on ordinary sized copy paper. Floyd's remaining good eye is tired after he is weary of "seeing" the world.

The woman who "goes up in the air" like a skyrocket is the kind that a man knows will come down quickly after all the fuss and flash is over. It is a girl who keeps a Maxim silence on her tongue that frightens him.

Too often the girl who had the With some types of men, a girl must propose marriage at 19, women.

A man is not actually beginning to get old until he discovers that a perfect dinner satisfies the longings of his soul more completely than any woman's kisses.

A perfect lover is one who makes a woman feel that it is breaking his heart every time he leaves her.

Too often the girl who had the With some types of men, a girl must propose marriage at 19, women.

ONCE more the American Red Cross asks for our help. It comes to the only people who can give that help—ourselves—when it stands ready to serve at any hour, in any emergency. This day the noble organization which has begun its work in the groves of olive in the silvery moonlight on the lovely hills of Lombardy launches a campaign to raise funds. Unquestionably it needs funds sorely. The relief and distress calls of the past year may have taxed the American Red Cross very heavily. The floods alone—those unheard-of, stupendous floods which swept down the Ohio and Mississippi River Valleys, destroying whole cities and towns—served to throw into high relief the utterly indispensable qualities of the great organization over which Admiral Cary Grayson so ably presides.

You must remember sitting before your radio and hearing those thrilling calls from the short-wave amateurs. You must remember the pictures that formed in your mind.

The city of Cairo, where the swollen Nile joins the mighty Mississippi, almost completely abandoned—all but a handful of its people ordered from their homes because of the imminent peril that the levees might break under the terrific pressure.

Federal troops gently but firmly removing women and children and old people from homes which may be swept away in one smashing minute—prayer meetings where thousands of men know ask God to spare them the worst of convicts under guard working furiously to strengthen and reinforce the levees—the blinding glare of searchlights illuminating all these scenes of misery—power boats and motorboats conveying refugees to the relief steamers, the cold and hungry—bowed down, whimpering, afraid of the water.

These were some of the glimpses of the great flood drama which we remember. And since pictures, those memorials must help us to better understand the terrible tasks which fall to the American Red Cross, the incredible burdens which that magnificent organization must take upon its shoulders.

When great disasters occur, the Red Cross leaps to the rescue. It must take care immediately, without any loss of time whatever, of a thousand human problems which even the United States government is not prepared to handle, has no agency to handle, which no organization but the Red Cross could handle.

These problems are immediate and vital. They are intensely human problems. The instant the Red Cross arrives at the scene of a disaster, a rapid survey is made of the requirements. How much food and clothing are needed and how many doctors and nurses?

The problems in such a case are endless. From the very beginning money is needed. You can't stint in these great emergencies of human need and suffering.

All this is emergency phase—the life-saving and health-saving phase. Next comes the rehabilitation stage of Red Cross work. The emergency has passed. The danger is over. BUT THE JOB IS NOT OVER. Thousands have come with their lives, and nothing but their lives. What are they going to do?

Well, that's the terribly vital and pathetic question for which an answer must be found. And it's the Red Cross that finds the answer. These people must be aided until they can get on their own feet.

The Red Cross is not only devoted and heroic in performance but extremely and efficient and careful in every detail of planning and expenditure. Of this you may be sure. In spending your money the Red Cross will get 101 cents out of every dollar. ALL HONOR TO IT!

ON Armistice Day nineteen years ago the world went insane with joy.

The war to make "the world safe for democracy" and "the end of all wars" had come to a sudden end.

Ten million men were dead, some of those bodies were still lying around unburied on the battlefields of Europe when the shouting and the cheering were at their height.

Millions more could not see or hear the parades and the jubilation because they were blind and deaf, with maybe an arm or a leg, or all four legs and arms, missing.

What was that about? NO ONE HAS EVER FORGOTTEN IT.

We Americans lost 150,000 men and billions of money in that war that ended nineteen years ago today.

Why did we enter it? Some say because our boats were sunk by German submarines. Others say because if England and France had not been conquered by Germany, the Kaiser was going to say to America, "YOU'RE NEXT!"

Nobody, in fact, knows anything about the causes of that war. All we do know is that it brought us the worst of the worst of the nations of the world and set civilization back years. It gave us Communism, Nazism, Fascism, Prohibition and induced a progressive slide in the morals of peoples and nations—debauchery and treaty violations.

It is a NINETEEN-YEAR-OLD ARMISTICE, not a nineteen-year-old peace, that is being observed today.

The world went crazy on November 11, 1918. The nations of the world are crazier today than they were on the first Armistice Day—all except the United States of America.

And may Heaven keep us sane, level-headed and firmly resolved to enter NO MORE WARS unless we are directly invaded.

Listen, World!

IF you have a sick cow in your herd, a blight in your orchard or an invasion of strange insects, the county inspector will drop around, look things over, give you free advice. If the State looks sick and ails, that sick man and plants are a menace, not only to the individual owner, but to lives and livestock everywhere within its borders.

In fact, the State doesn't wait for sickness to develop in your farmyard or fields. Experts wait at the State line, at all harbors, to investigate incoming plants and animals, . . . to safeguard public health and property against pest.

BUT SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A CHILD, SICK OR WELL, DOES THE STATE SAFEGUARD THAT CHILD'S HEALTH?

Ah, that's a different story!

But why is it a different story? Is not a child infinitely more precious to the State than a guinea pig or hen, a peach tree or a field of corn?

In a recent debate at Purdue University, two famous physicians debated this question of state medicine . . . Drs. Morris Fishbein and C. Dudley Saul.

Speaking in favor of such service, Dr. Saul laid aside all complicated, scientific mumbo-jumbo . . . got down to brass tacks, he made statements as inescapable as these:

"It is evident that only the very weakly and the very poor receive good medical service, nor is it always available to the poor unless they are actually destitute.

"In dentistry, matters are worse. Careful dental work is obtainable only by the wealthy. In Philadelphia alone, according to Dr. Walter Cornell of the Philadelphia public schools, there are 17,000 school children losing their permanent molar teeth for lack of dental care.

"Again, a study of maternal deaths by the Philadelphia County Medical Society for 1933 showed that MORE THAN 40 PER CENT OF SUCH DEATHS WERE PREVENTABLE.

No nation, no state, no family can function anywhere near maximum efficiency without health.

"What then is the objection to having public medical service which will give to all the people adequate medical care?"

"Yes," you may say, "that sounds convincing—but think of the taxes. We've got more now than we can carry!"

Taxes—that's a formidable word. But compare the cost of one spell of flu in the family, one abscessed tooth . . . one infected ear . . . with the small sum you'd have to pay, as your share of the cost, for national health.

Doesn't seem to make sense, does it?
